

Rev. John Rankin: A Beacon of Light

Description: A light burned every day and night at the John and Jean Rankin home that sat high on a river overlook in Ripley, Ohio. The Rankin family was closely connected with the Underground Railroad movement, and Rankin himself accounts for several thousand passengers going through his home. Today the Rankin home is managed as a historic site by the National Park Service.